

On the Subject of A Message

I'm forwarding you a message. Like, literally.

There are two displays at the top of the module. These are the main displays. The top display provides you with a sequence of 5 A letters in different fonts.

To solve the module, locate the initial message in the "A Message For The Reader" page and locate the continuation of the sequence. The length of the answer that will be given is equivalent to the length of the sequence in the top display.

There is a selection display below the main displays. The selection display shows all possible fonts that are available in the module. Press the arrows beside the selection display to change the font style that will be shown in the display.

To send a letter, press the Send button. This will send the font style that is in the selection display to the bottom display of the main displays.

To submit your answer, press the Submit button. The module will then verify your answer. If the sequence is correct, the module is solved. If the sequence is incorrect, a strike will be given and the top display will change to a new sequence.

NOTE:

- The message in the module could be given either forwards or backwards.
- Some fonts are similar looking to other fonts. Be careful with analyzing/giving the fonts of the message.
- Being able to zoom in the message in the given module/manual might become necessary to solve the module.
- You will not be able to submit an answer without giving a complete sequence.

A Message For The Reader

You need this. Good luck, my child.
